Myths and Facts

A missing person is defined as anyone who is reported missing to the police, whose whereabouts is unknown and there are fears for the safety or welfare of that person.

Dispelling myths

Myth: Adults cannot be reported as missing.

Fact: In Australia, anyone can be reported as missing if their disappearance is out of character and there are concerns for their safety and welfare.

Myth: People 'choose' to go missing.

Fact: Circumstances can limit people's choices and make them more vulnerable to leaving their usual environment and go missing. There are a number of triggers such as mental illness, economic and/or social problems.

Myth: When children are missing they are likely to have been abducted.

Fact: Most children that are reported missing are located safe and well within 24 hours. Common reasons for children going missing include a breakdown in communication and disciplinary issues.

Myth: Details about missing persons are not confidential.

Fact: All details about missing persons are kept confidential and are not made available to the public unless permission has been granted by the family and investigating officers.

Myth: If someone has been reported missing and they are then located, you cannot report them if they go missing again.

Fact: Each time a person goes missing, even if they have gone missing before, it is treated as an individual report.

Myth: When a missing person is located their address will be provided to the person who reported them missing.

Fact: When located, a missing person must give permission before their whereabouts are released. A decision to release a missing child's details will be determined by the circumstances surrounding the reasons the child went missing.

Myth: If Australians are missing overseas, there is nothing that can be done.

Fact: The Australian Federal Police and the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade work with agencies overseas in investigating such cases where Australians are missing overseas. Tracing agencies such as the Australian Red Cross, the Salvation Army and the International Social Service Australia also work to reunite people missing overseas.
